But, things have changed. In an interview with us last year, Geraldine Cheeseborough, who owns the iconic building at 214 E. Main St. in downtown Northglenn, Colorado, said the last year or two she's watched her community of homeowners and businesspeople share an attachment to their houses that's at once loving and powerful. And to her, the overwhelming response to the letters Cheeseborough and her husband, Leo, were sending out, announcing their plans to tear down and rebuild, was the "proof" of this tender, positive attachment. "We began to realize people wanted to be a part of the process," she told us. " 1d6a3396d6
