autokitchen Pro 11 The professional designers choiceautokitchen Pro 11 is aimed at the professional designer working in the upper end of the price range. (The Italicized items are the VS-6500 series) In general, more recent models have a USB connection and a USB connector, with one set of USB ports and one set of USB connector, where older models had a USB port and a USB connector, with only one USB port.[13] Memory cards with sufficient storage capacity are also commonly added to the camera body, with the SD format being the most popular. The design, usually based on the Pentax K-10 II, is essentially the same as that used on Pentax K-r models,[14] albeit with a redesigned grip and body to the front housing. In addition, cameras such as the K-x and K-r II are design compact Pentax K-series designs such as the K-S2 and K-S3. The K-x has both a LCD monitor and an option to flip it around to show the normal shooting view. The K-r II has two LCDs at the top of the camera. [edit] Battery Pentax rechargeable NiMH batteries originally used in the K-10, K-r, and other Pentax models, are increasingly being replaced by their more modern Lithium-ion counterparts. Pentax rechargeable Lithium-ion batteries typically give a good shot-to-shot performance with minimal effects to capacity.[15] Lithium ion batteries for Nikon have been introduced[16] and have become popular.[17][18] The K-x may be the first DSLR camera to come bundled with a wireless remote control, which allows the camera to be operated via the supplied W600, W800, and other similar models.[19] The Pentax BG-1 makes use of the K-x interface, allowing DSLR cameras to be controlled via the Pentax-mount K-x Remote Control.[20] The WX-R1 and WX-R3, which are either a dedicated WX-R1 camera or add-on WX-R3 modules, were also announced on the morning of April 10. Compared to other DSLR cameras, the K-x offers a relatively modest viewing angle and angle of view, which differs depending on the body style.[21][22] [edit] Video recording Unlike other DSLR models, the K-x is not a video-
