"What we learned from this on-field experience is that the players need different things at different times to enhance the game experience and make them feel more relevant to what they do on the pitch," said Aaron McHardy, Senior Producer of FIFA. "Based on this feedback, we included details such as creating different depth-of-play graphics and new animations, and instant tactical feedback."

Also playable for the first time in FIFA are the FIFA 22 global star and customisable player card templates, which players can use to create their own customised kits and player cards. Multiplayer New to FIFA 22 is "Player-to-Player Connections," which brings the connected player experience to online FIFA where the more you play, the more you'll benefit from your achievements in the game, including in-match rewards. On the pitch, Player-to-Player Connections will unlock special items, including player cards, club emblems, and perks like new player models, special player animations and more. When you are offline, you will see the items you unlocked online, and vice-versa. On-pitch experience Four new game modes are now available in FIFA 22: Possession Mastery This FIFA-inspired mode is best described as "Keep the Ball," as it is similar to the classic game "Abandoned Ship," where players take control of one of four teams, with the objective of keeping the ball out of your own goal without it ending up in the net. Earn a point for every time your team keeps the ball, but if the other team wins, they'll add a point too. If your team allows the ball to go in, you'll add two points to their side. FIFA Ultimate Team The Ultimate Team in FIFA 22 has been updated to include an experience-based currency system. Earn XP by completing in-game rewards like being top of the goal-scoring charts, and participate in FIFA Ultimate Team in-game promotions. In FIFA Ultimate Team, you'll be able to play for your favourite team or create and share your own ultimate team online, and when you buy packs of players in FIFA Ultimate Team, you earn XP that you can spend to add new players to your Ultimate Team.
