[Computer Graphics] [WindowsGems] [3D Computer Graphics] [Interface] [How to Read Headers] [3D Astragithrs I want to remove the x,y,z and time axis from the scatter plot. There should be just a scatter plot of the data. (Origin needs to be restarted for the axis removal to take effect) I have tried Close Origin and Open it again Close all the graphs Restart my computer None of the above worked. A: A few things come to mind: Do you have access to a different computer? A different version of Origin? An earlier version? If all else fails, try these troubleshooting guides. What is the exact error message you see? Is it easy to replicate? Have you tried other graphic programs? You can create two or three graphs in Origin and then try exporting the data from one and importing into another. Should you have access to another computer, I suggest you use a virtual machine such as Virtualbox or VMware Fusion (for Mac users) and create a "sandbox" with which you can try and replicate the error you see and discover if it can be reproduced. If so, you know at least what the problem is and you can begin troubleshooting. George Buggs George Buggs (March 2, 1928 - March 14, 2004) was an American blues harmonica player from Nashville, Tennessee. He was brother of Leroy Buggs. Buggs played harmonica on some rhythm and blues recordings in the 1950s, often with the short-lived backing group the Chicago Rats. Buggs recorded with Steve Cropper's band, also called the Cropper Brothers Band, which included Fuzzy Owen on bass guitar, and produced records for a variety of labels including Chess, Atlantic, Federal, and Pony. He also recorded solo in the 1990s. Discography "Pony Blues" B-side to "Sleepin' With the Light On" (Chess, 1959) "Soul Shack" b-side to "Pony Blues" (Chess, 1959) "Tee-Tot Blues" b

Phosphorylation of a protein in normal ependyma in rats: change accompanying in vitro aging. An electron microscopic study of the phosphorylated protein in the ependymal cells of the lateral ventricle in rats aged from 0 to 90 days was performed. The purpose of the study was to investigate the influence of in vitro aging on the phosphorylation of a protein in ependyma. At 1, 7, 14 and 30 days, rats were killed and their brains fixed by perfusion with a cold fixative. Sections were stained by the periodic acid-thiosemicarbazide (PAT) method. The amounts of phosphorylated protein in the ependyma of rats aged 7 days or less were almost the same as that in younger rats. The protein phosphorylated by tau is considered to be involved in the metabolism of the brain, and its amount did not change in ependyma during in vitro aging. However, the protein phosphorylated by means of calmodulin and casein kinase II did show an aging change. The amounts of these proteins in the ependymal cells of 30-day-old rats were increased as compared with those in younger rats. It is discussed that phosphorylated proteins in
