You have a global variable pass, which will contain the the return value of validatePassword. After you have passed through all the testArray items you will have a single result, either true or false. If it's true the rest of the function is skipped, and you are ready to return the value for the testArray[i] item. If it's false, it is skipped. The final return statement returns the value to whatever it is you are calling the function from. Detecting the direction of atrial waves.
