What's new in Polynomial 2 - Universe Of The Music:

Tower 57 (formerly Cooper Union Building) is a, 37-story supertall skyscraper located at 920 First Avenue, between 34th and 35th Streets, in the Financial District of Manhattan, New York City. Rising to 345 feet, it is the 52nd-tallest building in New York City. The tower is located a block and a half away from the Empire State Building, within the New York Community Trust's One57 development, designed by Robert A.M. Stern Architects and built by Mortimer Zuckerman's Westfield America. The tower was designed by Architectural Core, the firm of M/M Ventures Group, with BDT Digital being lead project manager. The exterior of the building was designed by architect Jean Nouvel, while the interior was designed by firms Rocco/Stone/Neuf and Architectural Core. The tower has 54 elevators, all of which are illuminated. History Tower 57 was proposed under the name Radisson One57 in 2007. On May 25, 2009, the site for the tower was acquired for $90 million from the Harry H. L. Steines Foundation, upon which the land across the street was immediately bought for $53 million from the same nonprofit. Investment company LNR was the original entity set on acquiring the land for a 16-story office tower, but in April 2009, they abandoned their plans to build the tower and instead proposed that it would be built by Mortimer Zuckerman's Westfield Group. LNR and Westfield signed a letter of intent on July 11, 2009, which was announced on June 10, 2010. On February 12, 2010, the New York State Urban Development Corporation awarded Westfield $340 million for the One57 project. The corporation terminated the letter of intent on November 10, 2011, citing "significant and material changes to the POR that materially reduce the level of care and constraint identified for the project". Amid the turmoil, original investor, LNR, sued Westfield in February 2012, charging that they had been misled by Westfield and the New York State Urban Development Corporation. The lawsuit was dismissed on January 6, 2014. LNR then sold their stake in One57 and Tower 57 was left as the only completed and occupied supertall building in the New York City skyline. Tower 57 opened its doors to the public for the first time on November 20, 2013. The building was formally opened on November 24, 2013, coinciding with General Electric's corporate headquarters in Fairfield
