KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Two federal inmates have sued the Kansas Bureau of Investigation, and three corrections officers, over injuries they suffered in a 2011 riot at the Lawrence Correctional Facility. The lawsuit was filed in federal court in Kansas City, Mo., on Wednesday, June 19. Keion McKnight, 23, of Leawood, and Manuel Alvarez, 31, of North Kansas City, are seeking unspecified financial damages from the five defendants. McKnight alleges he was unconscious for three days and suffered "serious personal injuries, including nerve damage that can lead to loss of use of his right eye and blindness." Alvarez alleged he suffered "severe nerve damage" and was permanently disfigured. Attorneys for the defendants did not immediately return a call Thursday seeking comment. When reached by phone, the Kansas Bureau of Investigation told 3News it could not comment on pending litigation.

The perforated plate allows heated air to pass upwardly through the fluidized bed of particles in the upper container. The air exiting through the plate is directed downwardly to contact clothing or fabric within a lower container of the apparatus. Such apparatus is relatively large and takes up a significant amount of space. Moreover, the fluid bed apparatus does not effectively direct heated air in a downwardly lateral direction. As such
