A statement posted on the national cyber crime cell's (NCC) Twitter account revealed that: The National Cyber Crime cell is investigating a major hack on Indian banking app Jambo IDS. The hackers stole user credentials from at least one bank and have published what appears to be hundreds of customer usernames, passwords, a database of breached accounts, and IP addresses associated with the breached accounts. The publicised statement further revealed that the computers used in the cyber attack also contained some interesting information about the cyber criminals behind the attack. The NCC also stated that it had traced and captured two servers located in China. The servers contained a list of the usernames and their passwords used in the attacks against the victims. The statement further added that: The hacked database included usernames, passwords and email addresses for around 1,700 bank customers and members. The stolen data was being used by hackers to steal funds and commit fraud. This is not the first time that a banking app and its users have been targeted in such a scenario.
