team air 1.2Q: Array of return promises (nodejs) I am trying to build a function that runs an array of promises, and return an array of Promises that resolve after all the promises in the array have returned true.

Here's my code: `Promise.prototype.always = function(callback) { return this.then(function() { return callback.apply(this, arguments); }) } function all(promises) { var results = []; return promises.map(function(p) { return p.always(function(value) { results.push(value); }); }); }` The function works fine for one promise, however when I add more than one, it will not wait for all promises to return before it rejects. Can someone help me troubleshoot what is causing it to reject? Thanks.

A: The problem is that you are calling something like `all(promiseArray).map(function(p) { return p.map(func) })` right away, without waiting for the promises to resolve. A then callback is a function (which will be called after the promises in promiseArray is resolved) or a promise. You are returning a promise. Instead, you should return the value of your callback, which should be a promise. You can simply use Promise.all. function all(promises) { return Promise.all(promises).then(function(values) { return values; }); } 0cc13bf012

Mutation analyses of the ribosomal RNA gene cluster in the rice pathogen Xanthomonas oryzae pv. oryzicola. To understand the molecular basis of the pathogenicity of Xanthomonas oryzae pv. oryzicola, we determined the nucleotide sequence of the ribosomal RNA gene (rDNA) cluster. The cluster consists of two components: a long repeat unit and a variant repeat unit. The long repeat unit contains four genes (5S, 16S, 23S, and 25S) and encodes RNA subunits of the 30S and 50S ribosomal subunits. The variant repeat unit contains three genes (5S, 16S, and 23S). Sixteen polymorphisms were detected in the sequence of the variant repeat unit. These polymorphisms were used to construct a phylogenetic tree, and the results indicated that a single gene in the variant repeat unit, RrmK, is the ancestor of the remaining genes. Five single-nucleotide substitutions, two insertions, and four deletions were identified in the RrmK gene. The four deletions caused frameshift mutations, which probably reduced the protein level of the RrmK gene product, suggesting that the RrmK gene is important for pathogenicity.
