I have seen following sentence in a sentence structure book and looked at the examples, but I'm still confused if the usage of "and my ears heard" is correct. In the book, it mentions that the correct grammar is "and my ears heard" but an instance of that statement was "He walked at a leisurely pace, and my ears heard the footsteps." However, it is hard to understand because if it were "and heard" I think we don't have to say the subject: He walked at a leisurely pace, and my ears heard the footsteps. Is "and my ears heard" incorrect? A: The book is correct; a comma is needed in such a sentence. The sentence should be "He walked at a leisurely pace, and my ears heard the footsteps," so that means, and then what? Intel's first venture into the ARM world and our first ARM server - kanzure ===== girvo I wonder if cloud computing is going to drive ARM server sales. I know some of the major players are already on ARM and it could be a huge winner as the x86 architecture seems to be running out of steam. I guess I'd need to check out who the big players are, but ARM's chip performance/power is quite impressive. ~~~ trezor I'm not quite sure. Based on the performance of the ARM SoC cores themselves, I think it's going to be their use in higher end mobile stuff that will be the driver. I'd be surprised if ARM will turn out to be a serious player for mainframes and supercomputers. ----- jakozaur Looks like Broadcom is preparing to get out of networking business: [broadca...](0cc13bf012
