The second and third column are the labels of the samples. In my program, I am using sklearn.naive_bayes.GaussianNB to predict the labels of the samples. The sklearn.naive_bayes.GaussianNB fit my data using the coefficients in my code. The CSV file that I am reading from has, for each sample, the x and y coordinates (from x=0 to 90). I am wondering how I can get all the samples in the CSV file to have the same encoding for the inputs (as I am using the x and y coordinates)? I thought about using str.encode, but that is just in one column of the CSV file: Title,Description The cow jumped over the moon,The cow jumped over the moon. The cow jumped over the moon,The cow jumped over the moon. And you use the import csv module to read this file. Then read the file into a pandas dataframe like this: import pandas as pd df = pd.read_csv('path/to/file.csv') Then, for each row in the dataframe, split the row by whites vinylmaster cut v4 0 cracked vinylmaster cut v4 0 cracked VinylMaster V4, a new and improved edition of the popular VinylMasterÂ . This blog is a testament to the fact that VinylMasterÂ .Q: How to handle many failed ssh attempts I am running a server on a rented VPS. At various times I receive bot requests from external IP addresses that look like this: GET /sample.php HTTP/1.1 Host: ip-address-of-vps Connection: close Accept: / Accept-Language: en-US,en;q=0.5 User-Agent: Mozilla/5.0 (X11; Ubuntu; Linux x86_64; rv:9.0.1) Gecko/20100101 Firefox/9.0.1 I have disabled IP logging and while it looks like this request is made from a bot, it's actually made from a client IP address. The script runs, so when this first request comes in I log it and put the output in a text file. I expect these requests to come in all the time, but I am uncertain what to do when they do. I don't expect a lot of them, so I don't have much in the way of fail-safes. Can anyone suggest the best way to handle these kinds of failed requests? A: Check with your provider if that IP address is blacklisted (e.g. most firewalls do have a "blocked host" rule which would block these requests). If it isn't, consider moving your server to a different one. Q: Emacs, move cursor to the first non-whitespace character I'm trying to set my cursor somewhere in the beginning of a long file. I'm looking for a command that takes a point as an input and move the cursor to the first non-whitespace character, character number 0. Is there a builtin command for that? A: C-x C-f tells emacs to open the file at point. If you want to open the file at a different position, you can use C-x r C-a to set the "cursor-at-point" to the first non-whitespace character, and then open the file.
