to develop a lot of different people who have brought an enormous amount of energy to bear. Sharon Gautam (Former Executive Director, CIDA) In 2014, CIDA was abolished as a department. This was an uncomfortable decision given that Canada's international development work is central to Canada's trade and foreign policy. In going in a new direction, we need an independent and effective way to shape our country's economic security and global relationships. CIDA is a key part of Canada's development strategy. Charles-Lister Cummings, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Development (July 10, 2014) We have been very consistent in providing for good governance in our assistance programs. We want to know what is happening. We want to be able to respond as circumstances demand in order to protect our citizens. We want to be able to be responsive to emerging challenges. Pierre Schori, Ambassador of Canada to the Republic of Korea (June 20, 2012) What we have tried to do in the [development assistance] programme in which we are engaged is to provide predictable and reliable resources for Canadian foreign policy, to bring to bear Canadian expertise in development, and to have a very substantial contribution to Canadian economic and trade interests in the developing world. Pierre-François Melançon, President of The World Bank (October 31, 2012) What is most important is that Canada is seen as an economic partner, [when] people see Canada as a place to invest, [to] invest in, and to do trade in. And this will lead to national and global prosperity. John Evans, Canadian Ambassador to the United States (June 20, 2012) Canada is very much interested in assisting in peace process in Afghanistan. We wish to be part of that. But one of the enduring aspects is to take another step, to identify the problems, and to try to contribute to a solution. Pierre-Yves Lacroix, former Ambassador to the United States and High Commissioner to NATO (January 4, 2011) Canada's strong international role is to put all parts of the Canadian population to 6d1f23a050
