The Conquest of Gaul The Conquest of Gaul by Julius Caesar is a history written by Julius Caesar in 46 BC. "Caesar's Gallic Wars" comprises two books. The first book takes the form of a travelogue, describing Caesar's military campaigns in Gaul, and the second book is a history of Gaul. These two books are the extant works by the Roman statesman, military commander, author and general, Marcus Tullius Cicero, the younger. The book in two books is a description of the Roman conquest of Gaul. Caesar begins the Conquest of Gaul in 58 BC. Caesar apparently intended the Conquest of Gaul to be written chronologically. However, since the Conquest of Gaul and the Gallic Wars are very popular books and those books are very popular in modern times (as he failed to explain in his work how he managed to conquer Gaul), he decided to split the books up into two books, The First and the Second Book. The Conquest of Gaul is part of the Historia Romana of the Gallic Wars. When Caesar was alive, it was not customary for authors to use the first person, but the Conquest of Gaul was written in the first person.
