Music Converter.U.N. investigators have accused white South African farmers of "deliberate, malicious" killings of at least 576 people in an ethnically charged land dispute in 2000 and 2002 that made South Africa the worst-affected country after the Rwandan genocide. The joint report by the U.N. panel of experts said those who were killed included all races, and not just the white farmers, and that the "deliberate killing" could amount to crimes against humanity. South Africa's government welcomed the report and took "reliable steps" in response, senior officials said at a briefing in Pretoria on Tuesday, the same day the report was released. Critics, however, warned it could fuel violence in a racially charged land dispute that has left some 15,000 people dead and about 600,000 homeless over the past two decades. The 23-page report by a three-person panel found "clear evidence of a policy of killing to
