The management of infantile hypertrophic pyloric stenosis has been somewhat controversial for several years. The aim of this study was to compare the clinical and economic efficacy of the two therapeutic methods: surgery and medical therapy. The charts of all patients diagnosed of hypertrophic pyloric stenosis from January 2007 to June 2010 were retrospectively analyzed. Data about the age, sex, breastfeeding, weight, medical and surgical treatment, total hospital stay, symptoms duration, presence of complications and weight gain at 1, 2, and 4 months after beginning of treatment were collected. Total hospital stay (p[Evaluation of a Mexican version of the Impact of Event Scale: the Sismo-Expanded version of the Impact of Event Scale (IES) in Mexican population. In addition, to compare the impact of a natural disaster with the impact of other traumatic events, on general health and mental health. A non-experimental study was carried out with the population of victims from the earthquake in Mexico City, in 2004. A sample of 77 people who have met criteria for psychological trauma, was studied, data was collected through a questionnaire with IES-R and the GHQ-28. The reliability of the scale was evaluated using Cronbach's alpha, item-total correlation, corrected item-total correlation and, finally, Cronbach's alpha after deletion of the items. The scores of the items were correlated with the total scores and with the scores of specific dimensions of the questionnaires
