

The Context Management Library Could Not Be Initialized Sap [UPDATED]

As mentioned before, the logging mechanism of Velocity is centralized in the context. Each request has a context, and all log statements are prefixed with the correct context name. To correctly use a velocity application in production, you will have to manage the thread context yourself. As a rule, you will need to put the log4j configuration file as the first context. (At the moment, the Velocity context is initialized and the LogSystem initialization is complete before the context classloader completes initializing the Log4j context.) You can override the Velocity context by using the setContextValue method of the LogManager: VelocityContext context = Velocity.initEngineByClass(Velvet.class); context.put("log", output); context.destroy(); The Context Management Library Could Not Be Initialized Sap Create a context. This is a way to create a simple context to work on. This example creates the context with a template. VelocityContext context = Velocity.initTemplateEngineByClass(VelocityServlet.class); context.put("templatename", "example_template"); context.put("log", output); String renderedTemplate = context.get("templatename"); System.out.println("Rendered: " + renderedTemplate); context.destroy(); The Context Management Library Could Not Be Initialized Sap Construct a factory that is capable of providing contexts to a script. VelocityContextFactory factory = new VelocityContextFactory(); factory.setResourceLoader(new VelocityResourceLoader()); VelocityEngine velocityEngine = factory.getEngine(new StringWriter()); velocityEngine.init(); velocityEngine.setProperty(VelocityServlet.PROPERTY_FILENAME, "templates-test.vm"); Velocity.main(new String[] { "--script", "templates-test.vm" }); velocityEngine.destroy(); The Context Management Library Could Not Be Initialized Sap Setting context variables from a Velocity context that has been created via the factory method in the previous section. For example:

VelocityContext context = Velocity.initTemplateEngineByClass(VelocityServlet.class); Velocity.context("templatename", "example_template"); String renderedTemplate = context.get("templatename"); System.out.println("Rendered: " + renderedTemplate); context.destroy();

The Context Management Library Could Not Be Initialized Sap To register a custom context for a resource loader to use, simply call this from your resource loader: import javax.servlet.http.HttpServletRequest; import org.apache.velocity.Template; import org.apache.velocity.TemplateException; import org.apache.velocity.context.Context; import com.example.server.resource.ResourceLoader; public class ResourceLoaderExampleResourceLoader extends ResourceLoader { @Override public Template findTemplate(String resourceName, Context context) throws TemplateException { try { context = org.apache.velocity.context.BasicContextFactory.newContext(context, new org.apache.velocity.context.loader.ClasspathResourceLoader()); return org.apache.velocity.runtime.RuntimeManager.getInstance(). If you need to be informed of errors in the runtime lifecycle (or any other changes in the Velocity context), one of the ways to do so is to register a VelocityResponseListener object with the Context. Any events that occur during the lifecycle of the Velocity context will fire the lifecycle events of your listener. This is a good way to catch errors where they occur in the runtime. + Write your own event listener

The Context does a lot, so we will focus on just what it is designed to do. But, also keep in mind that a lot of the functionality you will see today is because of the work of third-party modules added to the Velocity framework. You don't need to understand all of the complex inner workings of the ContextManager to use Velocity effectively. + Velocity Resources 5ec8ef588b
