
History Of English Literature By B R Malik In [PATCHED]

during the renaissance, the italian novel had developed a more realistic, observational style, and the english renaissance novel is a direct descendant of the italian models. novels in the english renaissance include arcadia (1587) by philip sidney, the faerie queene (1590) by edmund spenser, and gulliver's travels (1726) by jonathan swift. but it is the 18th century that produced some of the greatest fiction in the english language: samuel richardson's epistolary novels, clarissa (1748-1753) and pamela (1740), and daniel defoe's robinson crusoe (1719). richardson's works were modeled on samuel richardson's pamela (1740) and clarissa (1748-1753). this was followed by jane austen's pride and prejudice (1813) and sense and sensibility (1811). in the case of new authors, we may be surprised at the number of chronological gaps, in a literary genre that concentrates on a given period in history, or in a specific country or region. the first names were written in roman script, the second in arabic, and the third in devanagari. well known for his writings on the history of britain and the empire, he wrote a history of the english people in 1965 and the english civil war in 1968, the latter being reissued in 1985. in addition, he wrote the history of south lancashire, the history of shrewsbury, and a history of the commonwealth. malik was knighted in 1969, appointed cbe in 1987, and made a life peer as baron malik of bradford in 1992. he was also a significant figure in the arts. he was a friend of the playwright george bernard shaw, and of dylan thomas, whom he advised on the publication of a childs book of verse (1956). he was also the first muslim to gain a seat on the council of the national portrait gallery, and was made an honorary associate of the royal society of literature in 1994.
