Check out our: As this is still a beta release, we would appreciate if you could provide us with your thoughts and comments regarding the feature set in this release, as well as for future releases. Thank you! Adobe Photoshop is a powerful all-round photo retouching tool for clipping masks and layers, selective adjustment of color and levels, layer blending, and other editing tasks. Intuitive and easy-to-use software, it is notable for being forward-thinking and not limited to simple tasks, like retouching or editing only one image at a time. Further to the previous release, the user experience has been improved and the application size reduced. The previews, previously shown as airbrushed image files, as well as the transparency controls have been moved directly above the image to provide instant feedback on the effect of the mask or adjustment. The color picker window has been redesigned to remove the small selection buttons and provide a large color wheel, which allows for easier color selections. The yearly release cycle is fully supported, and we are committed to maintaining Photoshop and Photoshop Touch throughout the support period for both products. This is demonstrated in October 2017 when we made our first non-critical bug fix release in 8 months. Support for the PHONG (“phong”) lighting model was added to direct lighting and specular lighting. The default PHONG lighting model is now Ambient Occlusion. The PHONG lighting enabled by default in the Photo Filter realm, and indirect lighting is turned on by default. If you opt to disable ambient occlusion, you need to disable PHONG lighting manually by setting lightingModel to kEpsForImageChecksum and lightingRadius to 0.0
